

NEWS RELEASE

Former Apptio and Microsoft Exec to Lead DocuSign Engineering Team

2016-11-02

SEATTLE, Nov. 2, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- DocuSign announced today that Tom Casey, the former vice president of platform and infrastructure at Apptio and former corporate vice president at Microsoft, has joined the company as its senior vice president of engineering.

Driven by a passion for changing the way people work through innovation, Casey brings more than 25 years' experience as a senior executive and technology entrepreneur to his new role at DocuSign.

"As the world leader in Digital Transaction Management and eSignature, DocuSign has created a platform and service that is loved by consumers and businesses alike," said Casey. "DocuSign is a product I use regularly, and I'm thrilled to have this opportunity to help drive the next wave of innovation to help people go digital with DocuSign to keep life and business moving forward."

"Tom is a proven and skilled senior executive who has led large globally-distributed engineering teams with responsibility for building products that are found in nearly all organizations and businesses around the world today," said Brad Brooks, chief marketing, product and engineering officer at DocuSign. "We're incredibly excited with Tom's arrival, and the monumental business changing impact he will have building upon our successes to date as DocuSign's new leader of engineering."

Casey began his career in small startups in the Seattle area. More than 25 years later, he is still focused on helping businesses scale their development and delivery of cloud services while building a collaborative, execution-oriented team culture.

Casey has delivered large scale commercial and consumer cloud services at Apptio and Microsoft. He is also a co-founder and active advisor at 9Mile Labs, the premier B2B startup accelerator in the Pacific Northwest. He serves on the board of Annai Systems which is working to address the big data challenges associated with using genomic data in personalized medicine and healthcare improvement. Casey holds a Bachelor's degree in Management Information Systems from the University of Arizona.
